

Social Media, Online Marketing Intern Opportunities (3 positions): Aril 1, 2019

Are you interested in a career in marketing, journalism, digital or social media? Are you looking for a hands-on dynamic internship, in a self-driven, fast-paced environment? The OhioIANews is seeking three interns for all academic semesters. Internship Program members are an important part of our extraordinary growth, leading us to new opportunities, creative innovation in social media, and online marketing, and excellent learning opportunities for our interns. Working familiarity with Word, Excel, social media platforms and email are essential.

Interns will assist in driving social media through postings, creativity and innovation; contribute to building followers on Facebook, Twitter and Instagram through adopting best practices; take advantage of online learning opportunities; create and populate a new online OhioIANews Storybank & Library with our amazing web designer; update the website with stories from each new issue and evergreen stories; assist in designing and implementing marketing studies and online polls for insights on readers and advertisers, measure and improve content and build brand recognition; Learn and apply SEO best practices to improve reach; work with our publisher and editor to add video components to build out the website to reach more people, more often. With your help, we will bring the Irish movers, shakers and music makers to our readers' and advertiser's door.

This is an unpaid position. Writing students will have the opportunity to submit work for publishing consideration, but this is an online and content marketing focused position, working remotely. Interns participate in two monthly planning sessions with the Editor and check-ins as needed. Numerous networking events occur each month and writing mentorships are available. No sales are required.
